From the CEO

I am grateful to work as the CEO and president of MCD Global Health, a public health organization that works to improve the health and well-being of people around the world.

MCD is a unique, Maine-based nonprofit that leverages the expertise and experience of its more than 500 employees around the world. Our dedicated team works in a broad range of health areas to reduce the burden of disease through prevention, promotion, diagnosis, and treatment and through workforce development, institutional strengthening, and the effective use of technology and data.

I've been part of MCD since 1991, starting out as a health and public finance economist for our International Programs, serving as the project director for MCD's long-standing malaria elimination project on Bioko Island, Equatorial Guinea, as the director of International Programs, and now as the CEO and president since 2017.

Along with the rest of the team at MCD, I am proud of our nonprofit's substantial and growing work in the U.S. and internationally and invite you to learn more about MCD within this booklet as well as online. Explore our journey and how we work to make a healthier and more vibrant world.

About MCD Global Health

MCD Global Health (MCD), a public health nonprofit and member of the National Network of Public Health Institutes, is recognized in the United States and internationally as a leader, innovator, and trusted partner in the design, implementation, and assessment of public and global health programs and projects.

MCD always aspires to be a trustworthy, collaborative, and reliable partner of choice, recognized internationally for our applied, cross-national health solutions.

MCD innovates, strengthens systems, and builds capacity to reach vulnerable, hard-to-reach, and rural communities and populations throughout the world.

We work with country governments, various partners and funders, such as USAID, the Maine Center of Disease Control, UNICEF, the U.S. Health Resources and Services Administration, and local communities and organizations in order to successfully implement our strategies and attain our overarching goals.

We develop practical, creative, and most importantly, human-centered programs to improve public health.

where we are supporting health facilities in providing higher-quality malaria health services to Mozambicans.

We Value Our Partnerships

"It has been a wonderful experience working with MCD. As a small organization that has exclusively done in-person trainings before the pandemic, we had to learn new ways of teaching quickly.

MCD has expanded our educational program beyond what we previously knew was possible by having the skills and resources to quickly transform our programming into an accessible, self-paced, online learning environment."

August Sender, Training Coordinator, OUT Maine

"On behalf of myself and Noble Energy, thank you to your team for the excellent management of this [COVID-19] situation.

Your continued support of our operation has made it possible to maintain full production and keep our people safe."

L. Gene Kornegay, Equatorial Guinea Country Manager
Vice President, Noble Energy EG Ltd.

Collaborative

Trustworthy

Reliable

We're known for being a collaborative, hands-on, and long-term partner.

We hit the ground running in low-resource and rural areas. By using our expertise and humility, listening to and working with local residents and organizations with a data-driven mindset, our teams identify approaches and strategies that will be most effective.

We proudly partner with local, national, and international organizations across the public and private sectors. We have many long-standing relationships, including with:

- Maine Center for Disease Control for more than half a century.
- U.S. President's Malaria Initiative (PMI) for more than 15 years.
- Government of Equatorial Guinea and Marathon Oil for 20 years.
